abolishing the institution, might be modified and the institution maintained by Government as was done before, or that its management might be entrusted to the people.

Dewan's reply.—The decision of Government has been come to after careful consideration. The question cannot be re-opened.

122. Extension of the Nagercoil Town and the question of its water supply.

Mr. Paul Daniel (Member, T. I. C., Nagercoil) said that the population of the town was increasing every year. The educational and other public institutions in the place drew towards it every year a large number of people from the surrounding villages, who settled there for the education of their children, for employment in the institutions and offices and for menial work. By this and by natural multiplication, the population of the town was increasing by leaps and bounds. But he stated that there was no corresponding increase in the available area of the town. The Member represented that certain parts remained congested, not because there was no room for extension, but only for want of a few roads and wells in localities where there was extensive space for building. He suggested that there was unlimited scope for expansion in the west and southwest and the land in that direction was most favourable for building, as it rose much higher than the valley in which the present town was situated. He requested that the town might be expanded towards the west and the southwest to remove the congestion of the present town. The Member also pointed out that the inhabitants of the town were suffering a great deal for want of good drinking water. The Member suggested the following scheme for the supply of good drinking water to the town from the waters of the Patchipara. As more than two-thirds of the houses in the town were on low ground, they could be easily supplied with water from a reservoir constructed at a little distance and furnished with filtering apparatus; and the people were prepared to pay a reasonable tax. In conclusion, he submitted that the scheme was feasible and worth the careful consideration of the Government, there was real need, and the water was at hand; much of the town was low and the cost was not likely to be prohibitive

Dewan's reply.—Noted.
